Chapter 1 by romantiCaveman

Hermione gave Harry a meaningful look. She could tell he was hiding something.

Harry sighed. "Alright, fine. My scar started hurting again."

Ron gasped. "Do you think it's.../You Know-/"

"This is why I didn't want to tell you!" Harry snapped. "Because it's always /'Oooh, Voldemort's up to something!'/ I really don't need to be his...divining rod-thing right now! Can't Voldemort just time his world-threatening plans at sometime /other/ than exam week?"

It was a beautiful summer day on the grounds of the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. The sun and air called Harry, Ron, and Hermione outside of the library to a hill overlooking the lake. It sadly was not very conducive to studying for finals.

"I dunno, mate," said Ron. "You think we might get exempt if we're busy saving the wizarding world?"

"Ron!" Hermione said. "We can't just use that as an excuse every year!"

Suddenly Harry clutched his chest in pain. It felt like his chest was being torn apart and pushing against his skin.

"Harry! Your scar!"

"Blimey! It looks like a unicorn horn!"

Through the tears welling up in his eyes, Harry could see a long object stretching from his head like the brim of a baseball cap. It twisted and spun into a hand. Then an arm. Then a mass of other colorful limbs.

Ron pointed her wand at the mass writhing from Harry's head. "It's like some sort of parasite!"

"You watch him!" Hermione began bolting for the doors of the castle. "I'll get Dumble--!"

But before Hermione could take another step, the mass of skin suddenly shot itself from Harry's head at high speed, sending his body flying into the ground.

Harry blinked the tears away as he gasped for breath. The pain had stopped, and he felt his forehead was back to normal. Ron and Hermione were quickly at his side.

"Mama miaaaa..."

The trio turned to look at the mass, suddenly speaking and revealing itself to be two middle-aged men brightly dressed in matching work uniforms. The one in red got to his feet triumphantly, his mustache blowing in the wind as he stared at Hogwarts.

"C'mon, Luigi! I betcha the Princess is-a in /this/ castle!"

movie SPACE JAM came from) would have to send a "tribute" to fight to the death in an intergalactically broadcast Hunger Games on an isolated planet.

The Wizarding World didn't pay much attention to this broadcast, as places like Hogwarts got bad reception.

After the buzzer went off, Shrek (one of the two Earth Tributes) ran for the Cornucopia, believing his massive ogre strength would allow him to plow through the center and get the best of the loot, but he would be stopped in his tracks by the other Earth Tribute:

The T-800. The Terminator.

Chapter 4 by Drew Johnson

Suddenly a wormhole opens up and out come the Sliders (season 4 cast)

Quin looks at the timer. It show 10 hours until they could leave this universe. They were on the hunger games planet in a thick swamp. Luckily for them the previous universe they were on was a purge planet so they were already armed to the teeth.

"We should look for civilization and try to figure out kind of world this is" Rembrandt said.

"That's if this world even has civilization" Colin remarked.

Maggie says "Maybe in this universe man never evolved"

Quin looked and then states "none of these plant look familiar". He thought for a second."This could be an earth where all of evolution was take off track and very few (If any) of the same spices that we know of" he said.

FOOM

"Mario! We need to hurry! It's starting!"

Back on Earth, Mario and Luigi were in the middle of Hogwarts Castle, pushing through throngs of students, trying to get to the top of the castle to call out for the "Princess" they were looking for.

"Heh, opening doors," Mario said, "it's-a like /Hotel Mario/ all over again!"

FOOM

"What are they?" Ron asked while running alongside Harry and Hermione. The three of them were hot on the tail of the Mario Bros., trying to limit the damage their frantic rampage.

"They might be a metaphor," Hermione said. "Since they came out of Harry's head, they might be some built up emotional tension."

"Wait, what?!" Harry said.

FOOM

"Whoa," said Ron, trying to keep up both physically and mentally, "so you're saying they're like a part of Harry's...subconscious?"

"They pushed out through his forehead in an awfully phallic shape," Hermione mused. "Perhaps this 'Princess' they're searching for is Harry's deeply repressed desire for love."

"I'm /right here,/ you know!" Harry snapped.

Hermione sighed between panting for breaths. "Of /course/ you are. You know, Harry, not everything has to be about you /all the time./"

FOOM

/"What the Hell is that noise?"/ Hermione shouted.

"You don't know?" Mario asked. The trio was now within speaking distance of Mario & Luigi.

"It's-a planets exploding!" Luigi yelled back. "I swear-a, wizards never pay attention to intergalactic events: always caught in their own little bubble fussing about 'Moldervort' and Mundemore!"

FOOM

"Planets?" Harry faltered. "What's with you two? Exploding planets?"

"The cannon on Starkiller Base." Mario gritted his teeth. "Each time a Tribute in the Hunger Games dies, the First-a Order fires its-a cannon..."

"And takes out a planet in the process!" Luigi said. "It's-a right after the 'Bloodbath,' so they're gonna fire a bunch of shots in a row. And blow up populated planets of the remaining Republic!"

FOOM

Ron cursed in astonishment. "Entire freakin' planets?!"

"Like the Death Star," Harry said quietly.

"Eh! That's-a what I said!" Mario said cheerfully. He then turned to scowl at Luigi, still running alongside him. "But /Luigi/ here said it was 'nothing like the Death Star!'"

"Well, it's /not!/" Luigi said defensively. "The Death Star was a battle station designed to look like a moon. Starkiller Base is a planet terraformed into a superweapon that sucks up energy--"

FOOM

"That's like saying 'galoombas are nothing like goombas!'" Mario snapped.

"So, uh, not to break up this /enlightening/ discussion on semantics," Hermione said, "but is there anything we can do about the killer planet death laser? Preferably before it decides to blow /us/ up?"

"What do you /think/ we've been trying to do?" Mario said. "We need to find the Princ--"

FOOM

The five of them stopped in their tracks. Running towards them in the hallway was an older woman dressed in an earthy-colored uniform.

"Took you boys long enough," she called out, while joining their group.

"Princess!" Mario said happily.

"Princess Leia!" Luigi said.

FOOM

"/General/ Leia, Boys," Leia Organa corrected them with a smile. "Follow me to the elevator! The fleet's almost ready for take off." She looked over at the dumbfounded Harry, Hermione, and Ron. "And bring your, uh.../padwans/ with you. We're gonna need all the help we can get if we're going to crash the First Order's Intergalactic Hunger Games."

Chapter 6 by James Brown

*Satan joins the chaos, because it truly isn't a Multi-Crossover Hell until the Prince of Hell himself shows up.***

Leia, Mario, Luigi, Harry, Ron and Hermione were shocked to see the devil himself.

Lucifer spoke to them in the dark stormy voice, and he said "I will take you the front lines of this battle, to Planet Hunger Games, where I will unite the greatest warriors of our universe and beyond for one Final Ultimate Battle Event Royale(FUBER)"

With the snap of his fingers they were instantly transported right in front of the sliders. He then splits into 20 Devils who teleport away then teleport back each holding a contestant for his sick game.

The fighters are, Batman, Robocop, Leonardo the Ninja Turtles, Optimus Prime, Frankenstein, She Hulk, Mewtwo, Black Bolt, Tron, Spider Man, Inspector Gadget, Austin Powers, Wolverine, James Bond, Luke Skywalker, Ash from Evil Dead, Freddy Krueger, Reed Richards and Doctor Doom.

The Prince of Darkness poke once again "Welcome to the ultimate battle of all time. Whoever survive the longest will be declared the winner. The winner will receive three wishes without any punishment, no twist, no false promises."

Chapter 7 by Drew Johnson

When the group reached the weapons all out chaos spread. Wolverine sliced Austin Powers in to bits . Optimus Prime turned into a truck and started running people over. Ash shot James Bond right between his eyes. Doctor Doom confronted Reed Richards and the sliders. Doom reveled he had killed red Hulk for the infinity stone of power, then Reed reveled he still had the stone of mind. She Hulk had the soul gem (she found it right before the devil kidnapped her), Spider Man had the gem of time (iron man must have gave it to him), Black Bolt still has the space gem. But the Doom announced to them that Wolverine had the realty gem implanted in his skull.

Oprimus Prime ran over Batman, Leonardo the Ninja Turtles, Frankenstein, Mewtwo, Inspector Gadget, Luke Skywalker and Freddy Krueger. Suddenly Megatron Popped out of a shadow and reveled that he was the Cybertron tribute. and they both started fighting. As they fought they talked and Prime reveled the he would kill everyone to get the wishes to bring back everyone who has ever died in the hunger games.

Reed Richards and Doctor Doom were arguing about the power of the gems when Tron overheard them. Tron ran to the center of the fight and stole the gems off of the marvel heroes and used his identity disk to brake open Wolverines adamantium skull and stole the gem of realty from the mess that was left. Tron came back to the sliders and gave Reed the rest of the gems. Reed and Doom begin to battle but Reed overpowers Doom and take the gem as well as the glove of Doom's armor.

Mr. Fantastic then builds an infinity gantlet and teleports right in front of the Emperor Snokes. Richards then yells at Lucifer:

Come and let's settle this here and now, THE HUNGER GAMES AND THE FIRST ORDER ENDS WITH US!

Chapter 8 by romantiCaveman

Normally, Reed Richards would've given Satan, the Prince of Hell, Beezebul, Eternal Janner of Souls, Lucifer, etc a fair fight. But he was tied up with his rope with the smug, smiling little bastard.

Satan himself was no longer smiling. He stood up and looked at Richards in Snoke's hermetically sealed throne room had completely thrown him for a loop. He could only utter "What the Heck...?" Before Richards wound up his arm into a stretchy, Infinity Gauntlet-fueled "FALCOOOON /PAWWWWWWWWWNCH!"/

Snoke, however, was less impressed. He simply scowled even as the force of Reed's punch pounded Lucifer, shook the room, and made a massive hole in both the side of the throne room and the rest of the galaxy. As the dust settled, tiny red strands wormed across Snoke's head and his massive dent-shaped scar, stitching the sides together and worming down to fix the rest of his face.

Richards' heart sank. "You're infused with Life Fibers?!"

"Such destructive power within you for a supposed 'man of creation,'" Snoke said, seemingly ignoring Richards' question, "such intelligence for a stubborn /boob./ You're a man of many contrasts, full of so much raw material to mold: you might just be my masterpiece."

Snoke got to his feet. "First, though: you must be taught discipline..."

Epilogue by PeterParker

"Dad?"

"Yes, Dory?" Spider-Man couldn't stop smiling as he looked to Dorai Parker. His 9-year-old son had been an excellent listener.

"Is this really the story of how you met Mom?"

"It's not," 12-year-old May Parker said, folding her arms. "Mom and him haven't even appeared in this story yet."

"/He/ and Mom," Dorai said smugly.

"Shut up!"

"Now May," said Spidey, "this is all crucial background information for how I met your mother."

Snoke, Reed Richards, the Hell isum, the New Republic Dept, the Slidors, the Night Vale-"

“Did I not talk about the Night Vale, yet? I could’ve sworn I did. But, yes, the Night Vale, the tributes, the Intergalactic Hunger Games, and Harry Potter’s head being an effective N.O. channel...all of this is happening for a reason.”

Spidey deliberately pseudo-quoted his weird old substitute teacher Mr. John Locke there. He was man of faith who made “I believe all of this is happening for a reason” his catchphrase while teaching history (which was good philosophy to have when your show is written by two guys who like to make things up as they go along).

“And that reason will have to wait, kids,” came a voice from the doorway. “It’s getting awfully late for a school night.”

“Mooom,” Dorai whined.

“Don’t ‘Mooom’ me, Sweetie.” Chun-Li Parker stood in the doorway, already in her nightgown.

“Dad, please,” Dorai pleaded.

Spidey shrugged. “Sorry, Squirt. I’m only the /spectacular/ Spider-Man; if your mother says so, I can’t do much about it.”

“Your dad’s a dork.” Chun-Li leaned on Spider-Man’s chair. “He’s not very good at fighting girls...”

“Wow, would you look at that!” Spidey suddenly said rather loudly, exaggeratedly looking at his wrist. “Your mom is right! It is really late! Up to bed, you two. Don’t make me count, and we’ll be up to tuck you both in in a moment.”

The threat of “counting” made Dorai scamper off. May rolled her eyes and made her way towards the stairs after him.

Before Spidey could get up to join them, Chun-Li sat down on the arm of his chair, looking into his eyes. “You do realize, /Mr. Spectacular,/ they’ll have families of their own by the time you’ve reached the part in the story where we meet. You’ll need to skip over /some/ of it.

Spidey pecked her on the lips. “Sorry, Mom.”
